- The majority of the personnel at the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences in 1942 were from the Ukraine. However, there was no overwhelming preponderance of local people and there were many Russians among the outstanding specialists and upper level scientists and administrators. The qualifications for employees of the Academy naturally varied with the resition involved. In general, however, the following were required for the lower level of scientific personnel (junior research worker).
  - a. Completion of higher education (ie, graduate of university or institute),
  - b. Some evidence of ability to work productively in research,
  - c. A "clean" biography, and
